APRIL 2019

Building on Our Legacy of Pioneering Work

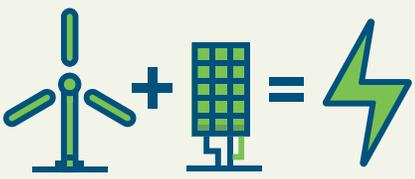

Two decades ago, CBIS helped pioneer the investment industry’s work with energy companies to address climate change. Now we are at the forefront of another issue receiving little attention from investors: child sexual exploitation online. This campaign is critical, as we are continually reminded by scandals exposing the tech sector’s failure to protect our most vulnerable. CBIS is also enlisting airlines and luxury brands in our ongoing fight against human trafficking.

Driving Progress

 CLIMATE CHANGE

Fighting Trafficking on Multiple Fronts

Applauding Apparel Industry Leadership

CBIS is turning our focus to luxury apparel brands as we continue working with retailers to eliminate forced labor from supply chains. To maximize our leverage and reach, CBIS is partnering with fellow signatories to the KnowTheChain Investor Statement.

In January, CBIS led a $450 billion investor coalition that co-signed a letter recognizing Inditex for its Top 5 ranking from KnowTheChain. We also suggested the company take additional steps such as:

- Integrating standards addressing forced labor and human trafficking into contracts with suppliers.
- Insisting any recruitment-related fees in the supply chain are paid by employers, not workers.

Airlines Report Encouraging Steps

CBIS is also engaging airlines in our fight against human trafficking, and contacted five carriers seeking information on their efforts. This campaign builds on our extensive work with United Continental, led by Mercy Investments, as the airline has emerged as a rising leader.

“We recognize that our Cabin Crew and Ground Staff can be in a position to identify and report suspected cases. We therefore provide recurrent training to them so as to maintain awareness and knowledge of the issue and ensure that they look out for signs of human trafficking at the airport and on-board the aircraft.”

— EasyJet response to CBIS, 2/6/19

EasyJet and Ryanair provided the first responses to our campaign in February, describing efforts such as staff training and cross-border collaboration with law enforcement. We are pleased to learn of this work but will follow up seeking greater specificity.

Groundbreaking Work Gains Momentum

YouTube's recent scandal over sexually abusive comments on videos of children was only the latest example of tech and telecom companies leaving young people vulnerable. CBIS is marshalling resources to provide guidance to these companies and their investors through initiatives including:

- Formalizing the industry's first set of investor expectations through our Tech Expectations Advisory Committee.
- Engaging our sub-advisers.
- Organizing global webinars and conference panels.

CBIS recently organized a global webinar on child sex exploitation and technology, hosted by the Principles for Responsible Investment. For a recording, contact the CRI team at: CRI@cbisonline.com

Pushing for Transparency & Recognizing Progress¹

Shareholder Resolution: WITHDRAWN

At a time when peers are making news for the wrong reasons, Apple has taken actions as a result of our engagement and resolution including:

- Strengthening app developer rules after CBIS raised questions.
- Ramping up vigilance on apps facilitating child sex imagery.

Shareholder Resolution: FILED

CBIS will keep our resolution on the ballot for Verizon's annual meeting after the company failed to develop an action plan over child sex exploitation vulnerabilities.

Annual Meeting: May 2, 2019

Shareholder Resolution: FILED

CBIS filed a resolution after Sprint was unresponsive for a year.

Annual Meeting: August 2019

Letter to Board

CBIS is seeking a more robust response to our letter on confronting and disrupting child sex imagery on AT&T's platforms, after the company's initial reply failed to address key questions.

Alphabet facebook.

CBIS is forming an investor coalition to address growing risks at Alphabet and Facebook after both were exposed for neglecting their oversight responsibilities.

Stepping Up Efforts to Reduce Emissions

CBIS was working with companies on climate change long before it was a hot topic in the investment world. We first engaged ExxonMobil 20 years ago and BP a few years later. Our efforts continue with those companies and others in the energy and auto industries.

A current priority is challenging energy producers to set goals for reducing greenhouse gas emissions not only from their operations, but also from the oil and gas they sell. CBIS and investor allies successfully persuaded Royal Dutch Shell to establish reduction targets for its products, but other companies are pushing back.

Achieving Results & Rallying Investors¹

Shareholder Resolution: NONE FILED

Royal Dutch Shell announced plans to change its business model and become the world's largest power company by 2033. It is also:

- Aiming to reduce its net carbon footprint 2-3% by 2021.
- Distancing itself from key trade groups over climate change issues.
- Offering some customers €0.01 emission offsets at the gas pump.

ExxonMobil Shareholder Resolution: OMITTED

To avoid accounting for emissions generated by its products, ExxonMobil successfully challenged a resolution we co-filed as part of the Climate Action 100+ coalition. CBIS fought to keep the resolution on the ballot, and over 100 other investors representing $9.5 trillion in AUM agreed. However, the SEC sided with Exxon. CBIS will vote against several directors for regressing on shareholder engagement.

Annual Meeting: May 29, 2019

Shareholder Resolution: FILED

CBIS co-filed a resolution with a coalition representing over 6% of BP's shareholder base, asking the company to align its business with Paris Agreement goals for limiting global warming. BP's board supports the resolution. CBIS discussed that commitment, and why it doesn't include reduction goals for product emissions, in a meeting with the company.

Annual Meeting: May 21, 2019

Shareholder Resolution: NONE FILED

Ford will release a report May 1 at the annual Ceres Conference analyzing its position under various scenarios related to climate change, a key request of CBIS. We discussed Ford's progress on the report and lobbying efforts on emission standards during a January call with company leaders.

INVESTOR SPOTLIGHT

CBIS often collaborates with our investors on corporate engagements. Recently, we teamed up with the Maryknoll Sisters and the School Sisters of Notre Dame Cooperative Investment Fund to file shareholder proposals at Verizon and Sprint, respectively. Sharing our concerns over child sexual exploitation online, our investors have rallied to support these efforts and attend dialogues to help us make the case for action.
